

There's no more room in the dojo

In the dojo, the wise bear Andrew trains everyday with his students.

One day, a new girl arrives (a hare) but the rest of the group (boy raccoons) don't want to accept this new member. This story teaches the importance of inclusion and helps children understand what bullying is and why it's bad.

Subjects

Technology

Social skills introduced

Friendship / Inclusion
Bullying prevention
Respect for others

Further information

Respect for others needs to be taught young. Even if you cannot speak about bullying in elementary school, helping children understand the value of respect, empathy and the right way to interact with their own classmates could help prevent unacceptable behaviour in the future. Offering the right suggestions and showing good examples to children, without scolding them, can make a big difference.
